

Ethnographic Studies, No. 11, Autumn 2009

R.G. Collingwood, Ethnomethodology and Psychology

Visiting Editor: Ivan Leudar

		Pages
Editorial Comment		2
James Connelly	R.G. Collingwood: From Anthropology to Metaphysics	3-23
Alan Costall	Frederic Bartlett and the Idea of an Historical Psychology	24-38
Ivan Leudar	What can R.G. Collingwood do for psychology today?	39-60
Giuseppina D'Oro	The Autonomy of the Human Sciences: Three Generations of Non-Reductivists	61-75
Baudouin Dupret	The Judge, the Spirits and the Law: Devil Possession, Personal Agency and Mind/Body Dichotomy in an Egyptian Courtroom	76-86
Michael Lynch	Ethnomethodology and History: Documents and the Production of History	87-106
Wes Sharrock	Perennial arguments about intelligibility and rationality in the philosophy of the social sciences	107-124
Mathieu Marion	Some Remarks on Collingwood and Relativism	125-155
John Pickstone	Collingwood, Whewell and Ways of Knowing: reflections on historicism and idealism in the study of science.	156-176